Santa Claus Popular In Shopping District

Santa Claus proved to be a very popular fellow last night as he traversed the shopping district, mingling with the crowds and followed by a group of youngsters who thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Mill and Radcliffe streets had a real Christmas atmosphere.

Santa went about the district with a pack on his back and shook hands with the kiddies who flocked to his side. He went into the stores followed by the crowd and the grown-ups appeared to enjoy the occasion as much as the children.

Shoppers were out in full force last night and it is expected that there will be even greater crowds tonight. Santa is going to be on hand and his visit is being eagerly anticipated.

GIFT OF AN AUTOMOBILE FROM DAD TO FAMILY WILL BRING MORE JOY AND LASTING PLEASURE THAN ANY OTHER; TIME YET TO ORDER A CAR

Many Men Will Keep Plans Secret, Placing Key in Container On the Tree for Christmas Day — Means Comfort and Pleasure in Winter and Summer

By Gift Seeker

There is one gift that can be suspended on the tree at Christmas which will without a doubt bring more joy and pleasure to the entire family, yes, young and old, than any other.

What is it? A box containing a key that will fit the ignition lock of an automobile! Of course, you have to agree with me now.

Many heads of families, the men who test any form of shopping and who usually leave their share of that task up to the women, are solving their gift problem in a most generous manner.

With a decision to purchase a car, a gift to the family, the man of the house eliminates what to him is a "bug-bear" in the form of gift hunting, and at the same time makes his wife as happy as can be, and his children shout for joy as they clamor for a ride.

The cheeses weighed about 18 pounds each and were sold for $4.50.

The men plugged the cheese in the center and gave the prospective purchasers a taste. It appeared to be all right. Later it was found that instead of being Italian cheese as represented it was cheese made from goat's milk.

The information sets forth that Erickson, while driving his automobile in Newtown, collided with a car driven by Shellenberger. A hearing before a Langhorne Mayor Justice of the Peace was waived.

Federal prohibition agents in the war on illegal manufacture of liquor, charged against a still on a farm near Tullytown Wednesday afternoon, taking one prisoner, and from the opposition's possessions taking for their own strong-holds a plant estimated in value at $25,000.

The two stills, of exceptional size, said to have capacities of 2,000 and 3,000 gallons, were taken over by the federal agents. They likewise confiscated 150,000 gallons of mash, and about 400 gallons of alleged liquor.

A man giving the name of Antonio DeAntonia, 153 South street, Trenton, N. J., was arrested. He is being held for a hearing before the United States Commissioner in Philadelphia.

DeAntonia was held in prison in Philadelphia today in default of $3000 bail set by Magistrate Joseph Cowart, substituting for United States Commissioner Howard Patterson on a charge of illegal possession and manufacture of liquor.

Twenty-four hundred gallons of rye whiskey mash ready to go "through the mill" was confiscated Thursday by State Police of the Doylestown substation when an abandoned farm on Church Road, Hilltown township, was raided.

Troopers Thomas Toy and Peter Riley entered the house on this farm in the afternoon. Inside they found a complete rye whiskey manufacturing plant in operation. There was evidence that the plant had been in operation less than two weeks.

In charge of the place was Jesse Fonda, twenty-two, of near Sellersville, who told the officer that he was "just working there." Fonda was placed under arrest on a charge of manufacturing and possessing liquor. He was taken to the county prison for a hearing before Justice of the Peace W. Carlisle Hobensack, Doylestown.

The still capacity was 150 gallons. Twenty gallons of the finished, "white mule" was found in five-gallon cans. This was seized and taken to Doylestown for analysis. The mash in the forty-eight barrels was destroyed by the officers. The still and other equipment was taken to the county prison.

Samples of the mash taken by State Police showed evidence of the fifth and unsanitary conditions under which this particular moonshine whiskey was being made.

ONE OF THE FAITHFUL

(By "The Stroller")

Councilman Marty Fallon's dog is faithful to him, but insists on having his daily exercise with "Ted" Downing.

The little dog long ago made friends with "Ted" as that gentleman went about his task of delivering mail for Uncle Sam.

The friendship has grown so that now the dog patiently waits at a spot near the Elks' tennis courts, Beaver street, until "Ted" makes his appearance around the corner. Then they continue together, the pup following close at his pal's heels. All through the fourth and third ward they go, "Ted" talking to the dog, and the dog answering with barks or by nestling his nose in "Ted's" hand, occasionally.

But just as soon as they reach the Fallon home on the return trip, the dog halts. His duty for the remainder of the day is with his master. But promptly at the appointed hour the following day he is again at the rendezvous, waiting for the welcome sound of Downing's footsteps.

BOORS ALL

A reasoning being can usually find answers to his own questions, but there is one that stumps all. Why is it that motorists forget all etiquette and the rudiments of courtesy when they get behind a steering wheel?

It is not polite to swear at the dining table if the butter isn't passed the instant it is asked for. And almost everybody employs the polite "Pardon me" in pedestrian jams and crowded elevator. But get the same people in the driver's seat and there is loud honking and a cussword or two if the car ahead stops too suddenly or fails to start soon enough.

Seldom does one meet a driver on the open highway who will give an inch to the other fellow and surrender his right-of-way to convenience other cars. It is everybody for himself and curses upon the other fellow even though his faults and transgressions are your own.

Motorists spurt around corners without regard for the safety and hearts of others; cars cross and halt suddenly in front of others without giving warning, and, instead of taking accidents calmly and assuming one's fair share of the blame, drivers and passengers strive to see which can out-yell the other and out-cuss him. Why is politeness left behind or forgotten by most drivers the minute they step into their car?

Once an individual expert in the art of cussing was said to "swear like a trooper." He swears like a "traffic policeman" or "he swears like a motorist in a traffic jam" are similes in common usage. Did the motorist get his education from the traffic officer, or the traffic officer get his from the motorist?

IOWA AUTOS AND CORN

One of the most interesting bits of statistics presented recently comes from Robley Winfrey of the Iowa State College engineering experiment station, who has discovered that Iowa's annual automobile bill exceeds its annual income from the famous Iowa corn crop.

Thus, in 1930, the people of Iowa spent more than $290,000,000 on their autos. The average income derived from Iowa corn comes to about $255,000,000.

Just what may be the significance of all this—if, indeed, it has any significance—is not quite clear. But it is, as we say, interesting. It illustrates in a graphic way the thoroughness with which a great agricultural state has become motorized.

A self-made man is usually one who selected a wife that made him work.

Never mention your own faults; others will attend to that for you.

Many a man by virtue of his ancestry is only a shadow of a mighty name.

An artful woman can make men sane or insane, wise or foolish, at will.

No matter what rank vegetables may attain, the cabbage is bound to get ahead.

A man is never so sure that he is perfectly sober as when he is unable to drink.

MASQUERADE

by FAITH BALDWIN

SYNOPSIS

Leaving Hawaii shortly after her father's death, young and beautiful Fanchon Meredith goes to San Francisco, where she meets a handsome man named Tony. Fanchon is shocked to learn that Tony is a racketeer, implicated in a recent murder. She, too, is now wanted. Fanchon escapes in an airplane under the name of "Smith." Evelyn Howard, whom she had met on the boat coming from Hawaii, is aboard. Evelyn is enroute to New York to live with her aunt, the wealthy Mrs. Carstairs, whom she has never met. After Fanchon confides in Evelyn, the latter treats her coolly. The plane crashes and Fanchon is the only survivor. She decides to escape Tony and the past and start life anew by masquerading as Evelyn. She requests a doctor to wire Mrs. Carstairs that "Evelyn" is safe. A wire comes from Mrs. Carstairs saying that Collin cannot meet Fanchon. Fanchon learns Collin is Mrs. Carstairs' only son.

CHAPTER IX

The train pulled in at the station. Stood, panting and throbbing. Fanchon gathered her few belongings—she thought, wearily, stolen, belongings together and moved with the passengers toward the platform. Some of them looked at her curiously. All looked at her, whether curiously or kindly. One woman spoke to her, saying something breathless and hurried about a dreadful accident—fortunate escape—great interest. . . . People drew aside to let her pass, whispered among themselves. Everyone knew then. There might be more reports. . . . waiting. The old sense of being hunted, the cold panic seized her again. She was conscious of a hysterical desire to laugh. . . . long—shrilly. . . . If the reporters, eager, intent and courteous, back there at that big station, sitting there in the drawing room, had known, as they questioned her, that it was not alone the "sole survivor" who answered them, who replied wearily and reluctantly but with a like courtesy, that it was not Evelyn Howard at all but the Mystery Woman, the Gangster's Girl, who had occupied the press for some days past, what would they have said? How looked? What done?

For the press had been as unhappy as the police at not finding Tony's "brood." They had not even learned her name. For Tony, although Fanchon had not realized it at the time, had been rather careful where he was seen with her. He had not been "seen" with her at all. . . . until that one last fatal night. And then it had been Rosie who had upset the apple-cart. But Rosie had not known Fanchon's name, either. Yes, the press would have been very happy to have found her, as happy, almost, as the police, for the press would have made a front page human interest story out of it which would have echoed from coast to coast.

But they had questioned her as the "sole survivor" and as Mrs. Carstairs' niece, and had gone away, ignorant and perfectly satisfied in their ignorance.

Fanchon left the train. Now she was walking up the stairs. Now she was approaching the barriers. She bit back the desire for reckless, hysterical laughter. Tears were in her eyes. Tears of fatigue; tears of terror; of shaking nervousness.

A woman stepped forward from the crowd at the barrier and took her into her arms.

"Evelyn—my dear!"—said the woman.

Her voice was very deep—very low. She was, Fanchon realized instantly, in a moment of stunned amazement, the most beautiful woman she had ever seen. She carried more than sixty years like banner. She was tall and slender. She had great blue eyes and a clear pallor and a sweet curved mouth. Under her small hat her hair was silver white. She had lovely hands. And there were tears on her cheeks to match Fanchon's own tears.

For a brief moment Mrs. Carstairs held Fanchon away at arms length. Then she exclaimed, puzzled, incredulous. . . .

"But you're not Evelyn, are you? . . . not really Evelyn Howard. You can't be!"

Fanchon's heart turned over in her breast. The flush of excitement faded, and her golden skin was gray with shock. To have travelled so far upon her difficult road of deception, to have braced herself, to have dared so much and then with the first word of greeting to face defeat!

"You're not really Evelyn Howard—you can't be. . . . this tall, beautiful woman had said.

Thus, with the first speech between them Fanchon encountered, so she fancied, bewildered, frightened and ashamed, shame, disgrace—perhaps worse. A mental vision of courts, newspaper headlines, perhaps even bars wavered on the shimmering screen of her mind. She swayed back from Mrs. Carstairs, stammering something. . . . a vain, a mad protest.

Jeune Carstairs' arm went around her again, holding her in a close and comforting clasp. She said, quickly, contritely.

"Dear, I'm so sorry! I didn't mean to startle, to upset you. What after all you've been through! What an old idiot I am. Come, we'll go to the car. Let the porter take your little bag. . . . Your trunk won't come for several days, but we'll attend to that."

Talking, she half led Fanchon out through the station and the crowds to the big parked car. The chauffeur jumped down from his seat, touched his cap, took the pitiful little borrowed suitcase and opened the door. Mechanically, Fanchon climbed in.

It was early evening. Fifth Avenue was at its best and loveliest under the slanting golden light. The car moved ahead smoothly, powerfully. A luxurious car, beautifully fitted.

Mrs. Carstairs still kept Fanchon's hand in hers. Fanchon, understanding nothing, still not comprehending the older woman's curious greeting, felt the blood come back to her cheeks and her cold hands, in a great wave of relief. The tears, which had been so foreign to her nature until the last desperate days on the Coast, rose easily in reaction to her magnificent, strange eyes.

She tried to smile at Mrs. Carstairs, realizing that, after all, no real danger threatened her as yet, but her soiled red mouth shook. Mrs. Carstairs pressed the hand she held.

"How silly I was," she said again, apologetically. "But I couldn't believe that anything as beautiful as you could belong in our family!"

So that was it! Fanchon flushed deeply, rose over gold. Mrs. Carstairs said, softly.

"What lovely coloring. . . . you didn't tell me. . . . your little letters were so stiff and funny. Dark hair, blue eyes, you said, I had only the little snapshot to go on," she looked in her flat handbag and drew out a worn little photograph. . . . "see?"

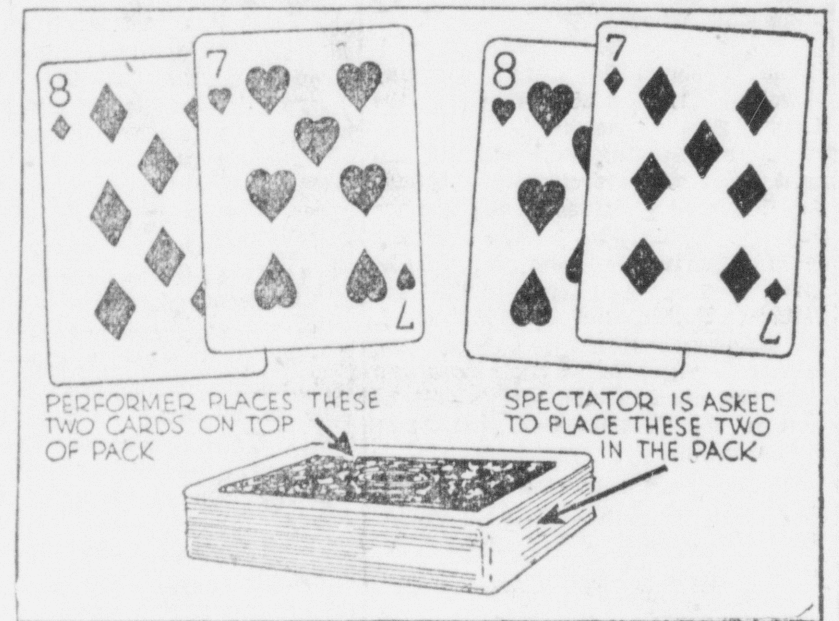

Fanchon looked and felt her heart constrict again. There they were, she and Evelyn Howard. Fanchon herself stood at the boat rail, bareheaded, the breeze in her dark curls.

She was laughing, Evelyn, rather prim in a sweater suit, stood behind her.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

TWO CARDS PLACED IN PACK LATER APPEAR ON TOP

This trick is a test of observation and memory. Take these four cards from a pack, the eight of diamonds, eight of hearts, seven of diamonds and seven of hearts. Previous to appearing before your audience, place the eight of diamonds and seven of hearts on top of the pack. Then take the eight of hearts and seven of diamonds and ask some one to place them anywhere in the pack. Lay the pack on a table, pass your hand over it, say "Presto!" and tap the top of the deck with your fingers. Then ask some one to raise the first two cards on the deck and let the cards that were placed in the deck mysteriously appear on top. The four cards are so similar that the average person will not be able to recall, after the trick is performed, whether or not the two on top are the same as the two placed in the pack.

HIBERNIANS CANNOT DEFEAT CASEYS, HE SAYS

Sporting Editor,
Bristol Daily Courier.
My dear Sir:

I wish to repudiate a statement which appeared in the sporting page of Thursday's Courier. The statement follows, quote, "The Hibernians easily tripped the K. of C. five Tuesday night and won a cage battle by the score of 37 to 17." For your information, as well as all local sport fans, the A. O. H. did not defeat the K. of C. quintet on Tuesday or any other evening of the current season. The team defeated comprised four men who happen to be on the Casey squad and another picked at random from the spectators. Furthermore, four of the men playing on the so-called K. of C. team had played in the previous game of the evening. J. Mulligan, M. Fallon and N. McGinley playing with the Columbian, while C. Dugan jumped center for the Fourth Ward All-Stars. Any one having followed basketball should know that after playing an entire game, a man is, to use a colloquial expression, "shot."

I realize you are not to blame for this misrepresentation, but attribute it to an underhand attempt of someone connected with the A. O. H. team, to belittle the Casey squad, who, according to my estimation, should defeat the best team the Hibernians can put on the floor.

Thanking you for your kindly consideration of this missive, I am,
Yours in sport,

JOS. C. MCGEE,
Asst. Mgr., K. of C.
Basketball Team.

Gift of Auto from Dad Will Bring Joy to Family

Dad and his family have an automobile. Whether the parents and children desire a camping trip, or a more sedate vacation to fashionable resorts, or possibly sight-seeing jaunts, the family car spells "service."

With automobiles reaching the "nth" degree of perfection in these years, and the many added and perfected features, Dad will delight in examining each kind, and learning the merits of all. The hardest task will be to keep the purchase a secret until the key container is discovered fastened to one of the green boughs next Friday morning.

The Chevrolets sold by Weed Chevrolet Company are backed by fine guarantees; Clarence W. Winter has the agency for the excellent Buick; Jenks H. Watson is the local sales agent for Willys-Knight and Whippet; while Percy G. Ford takes orders for the Dodge.

And no one will receive a bigger "kick" out of this secret gift for the family than Dad himself. There is time yet to order that car, and these dealers are prepared to serve.

Christmas Party By Catholic Daughters

Thursday evening a most enjoyable Christmas party was held in the Knights of Columbus Home, Radcliffe and Mulberry streets, when the members of the Catholic Daughters of Bristol Court, No. 1697, assembled and made merry in a good old Yuletide fashion.

A beautifully trimmed tree was the center of attraction, and Santa Claus appeared with his pack, bearing a gift for each participant.

The Christmas carols were sung in unison, with Miss Gertrude Roche as accompanist at the piano. Mrs. Maurice Roche sang, "Adeste Fideles," and Mrs. Carl Winch sang, "Holy Night."

Christmas games formed the enjoyment of the remainder of the evening. Mrs. Maurice Roche and Mrs. Neal McIlvaine received favors for prowess in these games, and Mrs. McIlvaine also received a special prize, during the evening.

A most delicious repast was served. The affair was conducted by the ladies of the Sixth Ward belonging to the society and the committee in charge consisted of Miss Marguerite McFadden, chairlady; assisted by the Misses Ellen and Mary McFadden, Jane and Anita Lynn, Elizabeth Cunningham, Anna Cunningham and Margaret Dougherty; Mrs. Catherine Lynn, Mrs. Daniel McDevitt, Mrs. Joseph David, Mrs. J. L. Heilman, Mrs. Burton and Mrs. Edmund Sharples.

The members of the Girls' Friendly Society of St. James's Episcopal Church held an enjoyable Christmas party last evening in the Parish House under the direction of the branch president, Mrs. David Neill, and the acting associates, Mrs. Frank Phipps, Mrs. Thomas Dunbar, Mrs. Goheen, and Mrs. Warren Thompson. A pleasing discourse was given by Miss Elizabeth W. Beatty, of Philadelphia, diocesan secretary. Miss Beatty's subject was "Missions," and with the aid of maps, she traced through Hawaii, the Philippines, Alaska, and other countries, wherein want had been prevalent, and many of the conditions had been alleviated by the helpful aid of the Girls' Friendly members in sending garments and other useful articles.

The Girls' Friendly Songs were sung as well as the Christmas carols. The music was under the direction of Mrs. Frank Phipps.

About thirty members attended and enjoyed the beautifully decked tree, on which was found a gift for each girl, who also received a candy cane. Refreshments were served at the close of a most enjoyable evening.

The members of this society, with Mrs. Frank Phipps directing are sponsoring the play to be given on Tuesday evening in the parish house at the annual Christmas Sunday School Festival.
